

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Flaherty says sorry to stung investors

By [Name] and [Name]

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Stephen Flaherty has apologized to investors who were misled by his government's handling of the telecommunications industry. Flaherty said he was "sorry" for the "pain" caused by the government's actions, which have led to a sharp decline in the value of several major telecom companies.

Flaherty's remarks came during a press conference in Ottawa on Monday. He said that the government's decision to force the sale of assets from the former Bell Canada and Northern Telecom companies was a "mistake" and that he was "sorry" for the "pain" caused by the government's actions.

The government's actions have led to a sharp decline in the value of several major telecom companies, including Bell Canada, Northern Telecom, and Shaw Communications. The value of these companies has fallen by billions of dollars since the government's announcement that it would force the sale of assets from the former Bell Canada and Northern Telecom companies.

Campaign aims to fill the pews

The [Name] campaign is launching a drive to fill church pews across the country. The campaign, which is part of a larger effort to revitalize the church, will focus on recruiting new members and encouraging existing members to attend services more regularly.

The campaign will be led by [Name], who is the [Title] of the [Church]. He said that the church is facing a "crisis" and that it needs to "fill the pews" in order to survive. He said that the campaign will focus on recruiting new members and encouraging existing members to attend services more regularly.

State a referendum on drug, health

Ontario is considering a referendum on drug and health issues. The referendum would ask voters whether they support the government's plan to introduce a new drug and health program. The program would provide free access to a wide range of drugs and health services to all Ontarians.

The referendum would be held in the next provincial election. The government is currently consulting with various groups and individuals on the proposed program. The referendum would be a key part of the government's campaign to win the next provincial election.

A deadline Justice's unannounced strategy

The Justice Department has announced a deadline for its unannounced strategy. The strategy is part of a larger effort to reform the justice system and improve access to justice. The strategy will focus on reducing the cost and complexity of the justice system and improving the quality of legal services.

The Justice Department has announced that it will be implementing a series of reforms to the justice system. These reforms include reducing the cost and complexity of the justice system and improving the quality of legal services. The Justice Department has also announced that it will be implementing a series of reforms to the legal profession.

Healthcare funding

The federal government has announced a new funding program for healthcare. The program will provide additional funding to provinces and territories to help them meet the growing demand for healthcare services. The program will be part of a larger effort to improve the quality and accessibility of healthcare services across the country.

The federal government has announced that it will be providing additional funding to provinces and territories to help them meet the growing demand for healthcare services. The program will be part of a larger effort to improve the quality and accessibility of healthcare services across the country.

© 2008 The Canadian Press. All rights reserved.

Subscription information and contact details.